To Whom It May Concern:

This letter is in reference to Andy Taing, a senior here at Alhambra High School.

I first met Andy during his junior year with his unassuming demeanor, and I encouraged him to join the speech & debate team during his senior year. He enthusiastically joined and right from the start, Andy began winning with his performances. I am not sure if it was his tenacious attitude that he possesses or his enthusiasm that has helped carry him during this first semester, but indeed he succeeded. Nonetheless, he has been able to achieve what few seniors have been able to do: maintain an excellent academic schedule, handle multiple leadership positions in extra-curricular activities and compete in speech and debate after joining during the final year of high school.

As a future college student, Andy has readily prepared himself for the next level of education. I do not have to worry about his work ethic nor him straying from his goal of becoming a doctor. I feel that he will easily adapt to his next environment just like he did the speech & debate stage. His dedication to his academics has provided a concrete foundation and his affable personality will provide a wonderful segue to college.

Thank you for your consideration,
