

Name: Justice

Description: This piece is a 3D + 2D experimentation, it is also a part of a sustained investigation about how my parent's divorce has affected my life. This piece focuses on the role of the legal system in romantic relationships. Particularly how the idea of divorce starts out as a burning candle, until the final paperwork is completed, and the candle blows out.

Dimension: 16x20in

Media: Polymer clay, acrylic paint

Name: Dreamscape

Description: I once had a dream about a cave, adorned with a collection of stunning blue lanterns. So, I decided to recreate the dream in a visual form by creating a character of myself exploring the vastness that is a dreamscape.

Dimension: 11x14in

Media: Digital

Name: Parasite

Description: I have been dealing with depression for several years, and I've started to see anger as a frequent symptom. I aimed to express my journey with depression through an animal typically associated with grace and innocence, reflecting how I was as a child. However, as I've matured and faced various life experiences, I often feel defensive and scared, similar to a trapped animal bearing its teeth. The drooped head symbolizes my deep desire for child-like comfort and need for affection, while the snarling head illustrates my defensiveness, competitiveness, anger, and lust for perfection.

Dimension: 14x8x6in

Media: Clay, Gouache, Chalk Pastel

Name: The Pumpkins Are Coming

Description: This was an observational drawing, and an experimentation with my style to incorporate bright colors with more realistic shapes and rendering. I played with combining different mediums and I learned a lot about which media can be layered, and which don't layer as well.

Dimension: 9x12in

Media: Water color, acrylic pens, colored pencil, alcohol marker

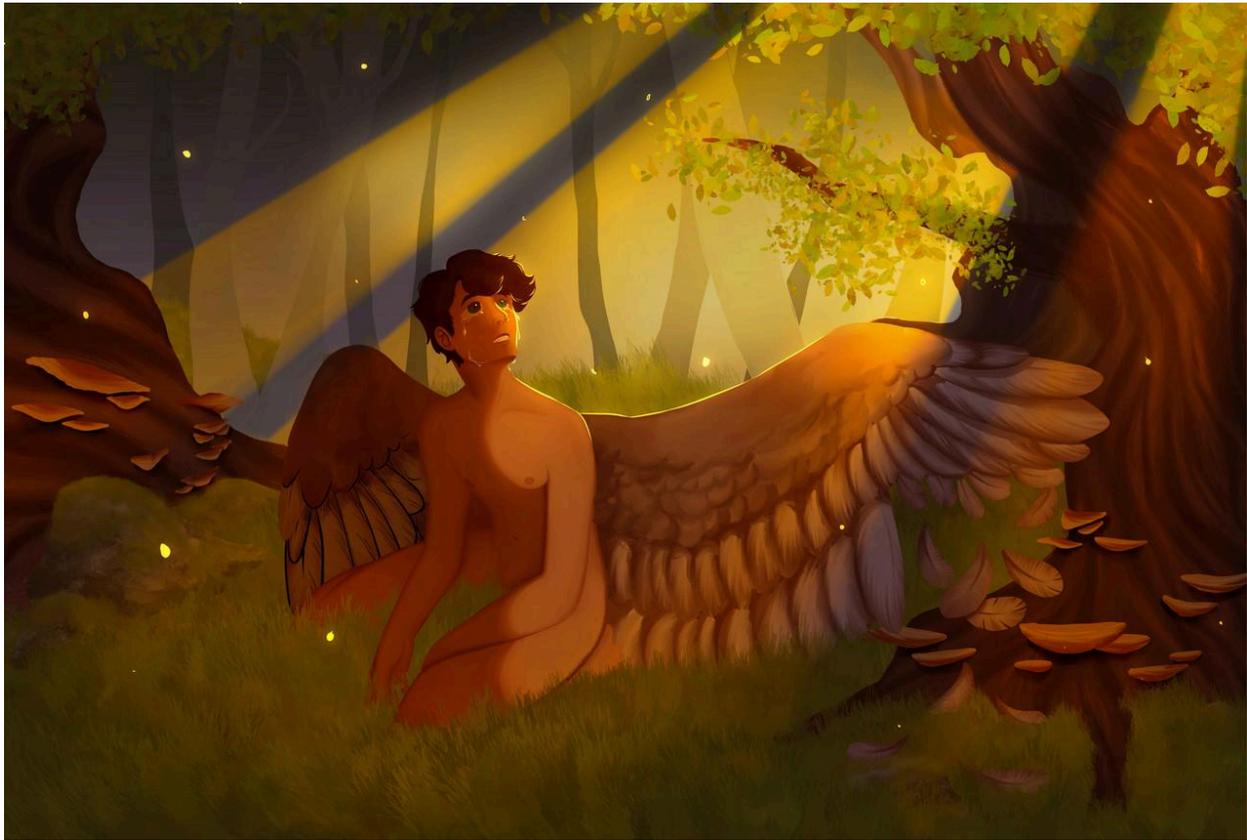

Name: The Adventures of Jamie and Remus

Description: This is my first digital comic page that I created along with some new characters, a jackalope named Jamie and a werewolf named Remus! This is their story about how they become friends, and eventually a bit more than friends. I based these characters off of me and my partner, due to our height differences and personality.

Media: Digital

Name: Fallen

Description: This character is a reflection of who I am and who I want to be. He was a messenger for the gods before he made a mistake and was banished to Earth to protect humans.. This specific image shows how he begins to lose his wings as he receives a messages from the gods above. He longs to be forgiven and to go back home. I relate to this character in a multitude of ways, I push myself to be perfect and to have a high work ethic which often causes me to become overwhelmed and make more mistakes than was intended. He is a very personal interpretation of my own life.

Dimension: 20x30in

Media: Digital

Name: A Memory

Description: My parents divorced when I was only four years old, I barely understood what was going on. This painting describes an incident between my parents that ended with the cops being called, and me having to choose which parent to go home with that day.

Dimension: 16x20in

Media: Oil paint, paper mache

Name: Teddy

Description: I've always felt incredibly connected and drawn to childhood items such as stuffed animals, they bring me an immense feeling of comfort and safety. I never want to lose the part of myself that still feels childlike.

Dimension: 16x20in

Media: Acrylic, paper mache

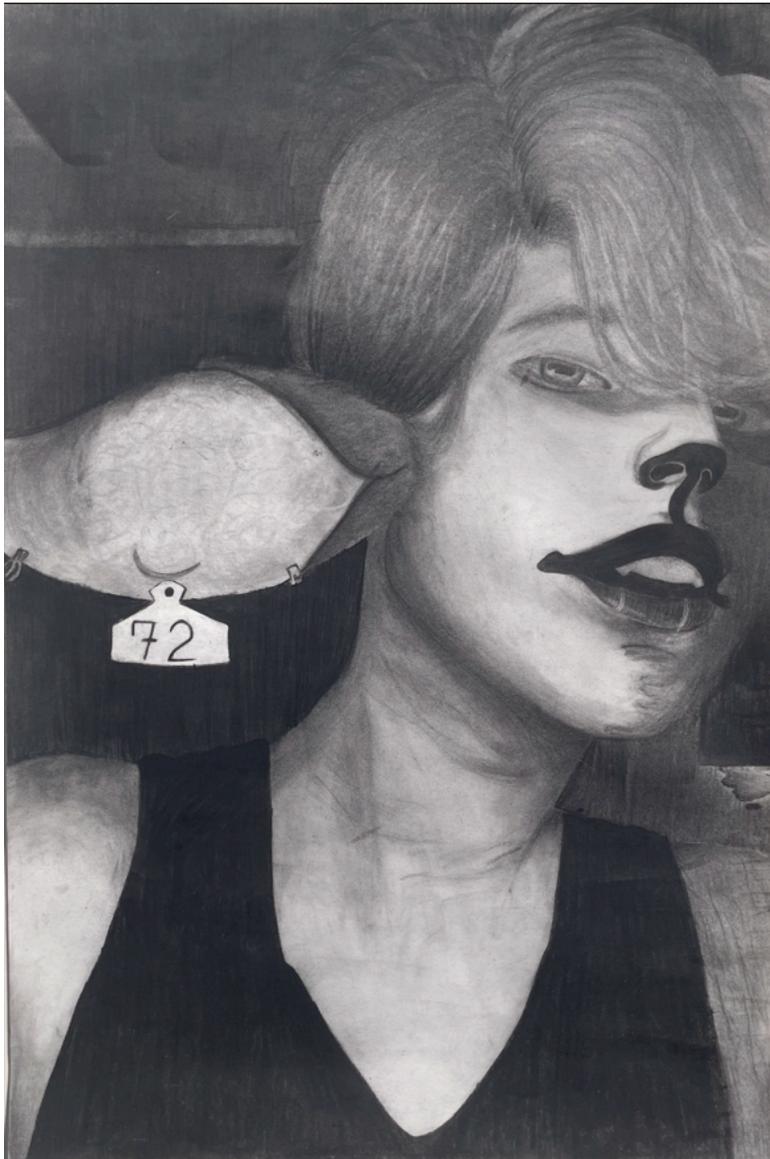

Name: Flight

Description: When I was a kid I always felt different from my peers. I never felt like I fit in no matter how hard I tried. This piece represents how I felt like there was something wrong with me, and that that was the reason I never had a close friend group, or why I was nobody's "best friend". I wanted to go hang out with the "cool, popular" kids but I only ended up embarrassing myself.

Dimension: 8x11in

Media: Digital

Name: Scapegoat

Description: Many Americans are often treated like cattle in their places of work, especially in fast food chains. They are understaffed, overworked, underpaid, and treated poorly. This piece represents every injustice within the work force that goes unnoticed or ignored. These people will not be silenced for long.
